

Straight/Coarse – 1c	Straight/Medium – 1b	Straight/Fine – 1a

Thick Strands that when shed can easily be identified against most backgrounds.	Strands are neither fine nor coarse. Similar to hair found on many Caucasians.	Thin strands that are sometimes translucent when held up to the light. Shed strands can be hard to see, even against a translucent background. Similar to hair found on many people of Scandinavian descent.
Wavy – 1c/2a	S-Wavy – 2b	Wavy/Curly – 2c/3a

Loose, stretched out S-waves throughout the hair, can be of any texture	Less stretched out, more distinct, S-waves, can be of any texture but usually of a medium texture.	Distinct S-waves with some spiral curls forming in different areas throughout the head. This hair type can be of any texture.

Cherub Curls 3a/2c	Botticelli Curls – 3a	Corkicelli Curls – 3b/c

Fine spiral curls that resemble the hair of a young child. This curl type seems very delicate and weightless.	Mostly big, loose, spiral curls that vary in size. This curl type can be of any texture but is usually of a medium texture.	Varying curl patterns throughout your hair, with some areas having loose and others tighter curls (usually around the face and nape of the neck). Hair can appear longer or shorter depending on the weather and humidity. This hair type is mostly of a medium texture.
Corkscrew Curls – 3c/4a	Fractal Corkscrew Curls – 4a	Fro-like Micro Curls – 4b/c

Curls that contract tightly with lots of small spirals. Hair can be seen as being dense but is usually fine and breaks easily. It tangles and snarls under the top layer of hair and the nape of the neck.	Micro spiral, zigzag curls that do not appear when you look at it. When you look closer, the curls are step-like in most of the areas of the head with some tightly spiraled curls in small areas (for some). This hair type can be a combination of textures.	This hair type does not usually curl, even with products. It is very tightly coiled with a high dryness factor. This hair type comes in all densities but is usually of a very coarse texture.